30 January 2003, Scheffer Gallery (Grand Hotel Hungária), Budapest, Hungary

Ladies and Gentlemen, I am aware that an exhibition opening speech should talk about the artist, but no

One morning a few days ago quite unexpectedly I found myself in hospital lying in a white room, on a wh

As I was lying there, believe it or not, suddenly I remembered that I would have to open the exhibition of

This thought at once started turning the dripping colourless fluid into blue. A kind of blue like the sea son

Its bow was curling up and it was softly rocking on the water and it seemed this beautiful blue and the cr

It is no fairy tale, ladies and gentlemen, – not wanting to reduce the virtues of the dear doctor Valeria – I

Because Antal Kerék obviously loves this world. Having been a lucky man he could travel around it and

Gábor Martos
irodalomtörténész

